Miss FNA Kayli Hildebrand: a shining example

Kayli Hildebrand is Miss FNA. Soon to be 20 years old, the soft-spoken young woman is balancing the duties of promoting the Fairbanks Native Association while pursuing a college education and a job at the University of Alaska Fairbanks. Kayli wrote the following essay which appeared in the Gana-A’Yoo, Limited newsletter. It has been edited for space.

I was born in Fairbanks to Bernard and Emma Hildebrand. I was raised in Northway, a small village of less than 300 people, where I lived until I graduated from high school. My dad is from Nulato and my mother’s relatives are from McGrath and Anchorage. I enjoyed learning about our Athabascan culture in Northway by attending potlatches and watching Native singing and dancing. I took a Native language class and enjoyed being around elders and adults who spoke it.

Northway will always be my home. But I decided early on that I was not going to stay in the village; I wanted to make a difference in life and to show my parents that I can do great things and succeed. I thought about moving my senior year, but in order to receive the scholar award I had to finish school in Northway. I received a full scholarship for being at the top of my class and I now attend the University of Alaska Fairbanks.

My first day of college was very scary. I didn’t know anyone at all, but as days and weeks went by, I saw people I knew and I also met new friends. I’m studying mechanical engineering. Why? Because my dad works for Alyeska Pipeline and I see that he makes a good living and I too want to be successful. I also would like to have a great job that will allow me to care for my family when I am older, just as my dad did. I am not the best at math or English, but I know I will do my best in college to show my parents I can succeed in life.

In my years of growing up, I’ve done many extracurricular activities including basketball, where we made it to state twice and I was also a volunteer as a Big Sister. I have held many jobs including a grocery store clerk, babysitting and working at Fast Eddy’s in Tok.

I now work at the Interior-Aleutians Campus as a facilitator. This allows me to work regularly with college students. It is a great working experience. When I complete college, I plan to succeed far in life. I know that UAF is the perfect place for me because it is close to my family and friends.

The Native dress I am wearing in the photo Dressed in traditional regalia, Kayli Hildebrand poses with her cousin Aralin.
A jovial man, laughter comes easily to Roy, although one suspects his former students have experienced a stern demeanor as well. As he talks of his teaching career, he delights in the details of his successful students’ achievements.

Roy says he was among the original incorporators of Chugach Alaska Corporation. Between 1977 to 1982, he and Sam Demientieff were co-chairs of AFN’s resolution committee. Roy says he’s eager to use his political experience to the benefit of FNA.

“Education is my passion,” says Roy.

Roy Roehl, Sr.

But he’s frustrated with inefficient delivery and under utilized facilities. “We should work more closely with the school district. Let’s raise the percentage of Natives who are teachers and staff.”

As a board member, he plans to highlight the need to better promote FNA services. He says too many villagers are coming to Fairbanks and not taking full advantage of what’s available.

Roy also wants to take a lead in increasing the level of burial services available to FNA members.

Roy and his wife, Nancy, who works as a tutor, moved to Fairbanks in 2001. They raised six children, all now in productive careers. A firm believer in the power of words, Roy is convinced words provide people with the keys to success. He says, “I always tell my students that a thesaurus is a best friend for life.”

As he talks of his teaching career, he

We need to tell these stories. In sharing them we free ourselves of shame that comes with the trauma. Both men and women have been affected; as we understand this we see that drugs and alcohol are often symptoms, not the real cause of our pain.”

Warm and friendly, Roxanne speaks with precision and clarity about the discoveries she’s made. She says she’d like to promote an extended dialogue about healing childhood sexual abuse at FNA. Working with others who share a similar interest, she’s eager to bring the issue to the board.

Today, Roxanne directs the Bertha Moses Patient Hostel, near the Fairbanks Memorial Hospital. A TCC program, it’s basically a hotel for villagers who have medical appointments or ongoing therapy at the hospital. With no travel schedule, she’s time to devote to local projects. Running for and winning a FNA board seat was the first step.

Roy Roehl, Sr. was born in Kanakanak, not far from Dillingham. The oldest of nine, Roy says the anthropologists call him an Eskimo. His mother says he’s an Aleut. He calls himself a half-breed and notes his father was a German.

Roy’s life took him to the Eastern Oregon State College in La Grande, where he obtained a teaching certificate. For nearly 15 years, Roy taught 4-6th grade at Dilkon, Arizona. Roy is a whole language specialist, a discipline that crosses math, reading and the language arts.

A Navah Nation village, Dilkon is 100 miles east of Flagstaff. Its school has 500 students in a community of 1200.

A jovial man, laughter comes easily to Roy, although one suspects his former students have experienced a stern demeanor as well. As he talks of his teaching career, he

FNA’s Mission
We provide our membership and the greater Fairbanks community quality services in a professional manner. These services are provided through special and innovative programs, which preserve the membership’s unique lifestyle and culture, while improving the quality of life for the community.

We provide our membership and the greater Fairbanks community quality services in a professional manner. These services are provided through special and innovative programs, which preserve the membership’s unique lifestyle and culture, while improving the quality of life for the community.

Steve Ginnis, Executive Director
Doreen Beaton, Deputy Director
Duane Hoskins, Director of Finance
Rhonda Howard, Director of Human Resources
Perry Ahsogeak, BHS Director
Suzanne Price, WCCIH Program Director
Perry Ahsogeak, Acting Graf Program Dir.
Mary Willey, Head Start Program Director
Angela Foster-Snow, Early Head Start Program Dir.
Shirley Williams, PAT Program Director
Freda Williams, Community Services Program Dir.
Louise Glynn, FASAP Program Director
Linda Woods, Johnson O’Malley Program Director

Miss FNA Continued From Page 1
was made by my mother. She is an exquisite artist and every piece of bead work that she does is beautiful. I showed her the way I wanted the dress and then she made the finishing changes on the design. It is moose skin and has porcupine quills, beads and caribou tufted flowers sewn on it for the designs. I originally wore the dress to my high school graduation, but now I will be using it for the Miss FNA competition. Wherever you go in life take some chances and get out of your comfort zone and challenge yourself. Good Luck.

info@fairbanksnative.org
Ph: 907-452-1648. Fax: 456-4148
Fairbanks Native Association
605 Hughes Ave.
Fairbanks, Alaska 99701

50th Anniversary Event
July 20-23, Carlson Center
Info: 452-6646

FNA put her to work again developing self-governance and capacity building programs in the villages. She was always traveling.

Along the way, Roxanne became a single mom with three kids while also carrying the secret burden of childhood sexual abuse. In healing herself, she’s become an advocate for speaking openly as one measure to promote recovery. She refuses to allow the past to dictate her future. Since 2008, she’s been co-facilitating talking sessions aimed at giving people the knowledge and power to move on with their lives.

“We need to tell these stories. In sharing them we free ourselves of shame that comes with the trauma. Both men and women have been affected; as we understand this we see that drugs and alcohol are often symptoms, not the real cause of our pain.”

Warm and friendly, Roxanne speaks with precision and clarity about the discoveries she’s made. She says she’d like to promote an extended dialogue about healing childhood sexual abuse at FNA. Working with others who share a similar interest, she’s eager to bring the issue to the board.

Today, Roxanne directs the Bertha Moses Patient Hostel, near the Fairbanks Memorial Hospital. A TCC program, it’s basically a hotel for villagers who have medical appointments or ongoing therapy at the hospital. With no travel schedule, she’s time to devote to local projects. Running for and winning a FNA board seat was the first step.

Roy Roehl, Sr. was born in Kanakanak, not far from Dillingham. The oldest of nine, Roy says the anthropologists call him an Eskimo. His mother says he’s an Aleut. He calls himself a half-breed and notes his father was a German.

Roy’s life took him to the Eastern Oregon State College in La Grande, where he obtained a teaching certificate. For nearly 15 years, Roy taught 4-6th grade at Dilkon, Arizona. Roy is a whole language specialist, a discipline that crosses math, reading and the language arts.

A Navah Nation village, Dilkon is 100 miles east of Flagstaff. Its school has 500 students in a community of 1200.

Along the way, Roxanne became a single mom with three kids while also carrying the secret burden of childhood sexual abuse. In healing herself, she’s become an advocate for speaking openly as one measure to promote recovery. She refuses to allow the past to dictate her future. Since 2008, she’s been co-facilitating talking sessions aimed at giving people the knowledge and power to move on with their lives.

“We need to tell these stories. In sharing them we free ourselves of shame that comes with the trauma. Both men and women have been affected; as we understand this we see that drugs and alcohol are often symptoms, not the real cause of our pain.”

Warm and friendly, Roxanne speaks with precision and clarity about the discoveries she’s made. She says she’d like to promote an extended dialogue about healing childhood sexual abuse at FNA. Working with others who share a similar interest, she’s eager to bring the issue to the board.

Today, Roxanne directs the Bertha Moses Patient Hostel, near the Fairbanks Memorial Hospital. A TCC program, it’s basically a hotel for villagers who have medical appointments or ongoing therapy at the hospital. With no travel schedule, she’s time to devote to local projects. Running for and winning a FNA board seat was the first step.

Roy Roehl, Sr. was born in Kanakanak, not far from Dillingham. The oldest of nine, Roy says the anthropologists call him an Eskimo. His mother says he’s an Aleut. He calls himself a half-breed and notes his father was a German.

Roy’s life took him to the Eastern Oregon State College in La Grande, where he obtained a teaching certificate. For nearly 15 years, Roy taught 4-6th grade at Dilkon, Arizona. Roy is a whole language specialist, a discipline that crosses math, reading and the language arts.

A Navah Nation village, Dilkon is 100 miles east of Flagstaff. Its school has 500 students in a community of 1200.

A jovial man, laughter comes easily to Roy, although one suspects his former students have experienced a stern demeanor as well. As he talks of his teaching career, he delights in the details of his successful students’ achievements.

Roy says he was among the original incorporators of Chugach Alaska Corporation. Between 1977 to 1982, he and Sam Demientieff were co-chairs of AFN’s resolution committee. Roy says he’s eager to use his political experience to the benefit of FNA.

“Education is my passion,” says Roy.

Roy Roehl, Sr.

But he’s frustrated with inefficient delivery and under utilized facilities. “We should work more closely with the school district. Let’s raise the percentage of Natives who are teachers and staff.”

As a board member, he plans to highlight the need to better promote FNA services. He says too many villagers are coming to Fairbanks and not taking full advantage of what’s available.

Roy also wants to take a lead in increasing the level of burial services available to FNA members.

Roy and his wife, Nancy, who works as a tutor, moved to Fairbanks in 2001. They raised six children, all now in productive careers. A firm believer in the power of words, Roy is convinced words provide people with the keys to success. He says, “I always tell my students that a thesaurus is a best friend for life.”
Head Start Wraps Up A Successful Year
From September to June, Head Start offers social competence training, mental stimulation and self-control guidance.

PHOTO KEY: Head Start Part-Day classes (AM 1, AM 2, PM 1, PM 2) are housed in the Poldine Carlo Building at 320 Second Ave. The Full Day Barnette Class (FDB) is located at 1024 Barnette Ave. The Full Day Cushman Class (FDC) is located at 909 Cushman St.
Distinguished Staff 2010
Join us in acknowledging the Employees of the Month
We value the contributions and accomplishments of each of our employees.

January
Crislene French
Early Head Start, Prog. Asst.

February
Julianna Shankle
Admin/Accts Payable Coord.

March
Elizabeth Bridges
Ralph Perdue Center
Internal Prog. Evaluator

April
Kathy Pike
Head Start
Health & Safety Specialist

May
Alice Murphy
Admin/Accounting
Controller

June
Minda Mull
Ralph Perdue Center
Counselor I

July
Gary Brent
Early Head Start, Cook II

August
Esther Frykman
Community Services, Driver

September
Gwen Mitchell-Scott
Ralph Perdue Center
Data Technician

October
Sarah Newton
Head Start
Education/Disabilities Coor.

November
Regi Soolook
Gateway to Recovery
Accounting
Staff Accountant

December
Mary Flora
Gateway to Recovery
Detox Nurse